Memo: request for a supplier onboarding workflow

To: Enterprise Architecture

We onboard about 40 new suppliers a year. Each one is handled by email: Procurement collects the company documents, Finance checks the bank details, Legal reviews the contract terms, and Information Security reviews anything that touches our data. Nobody has a single view of where a supplier is in the process, and in the last two quarters three suppliers waited more than six weeks because a document sat in someone's inbox.

We would like a workflow that routes a new supplier through those four checks, shows its status to everyone involved, and reminds the owner of a step that has waited more than five working days. It should use our contract register and the finance system, which already holds the supplier bank details, so that nobody has to key them in again.

The Chief Procurement Officer sponsors this request. We would like it live before the annual contract round starts in March 2027. This is a new solution. It is not urgent, but the delays hold up supplier payments.
